15.2.21

Muga Silk is native of Assam and named after Assamese word "Muga" which indicates the amber (brown) colour of cocoon. Antheraea assamensis is the scientific name of Muga silkworm. The species was first described by Johann Wilhelm Helfer in 1837. It is largely found in Assam in Northeast India where 99% of its production occurs. Muga silk is a variety of wild silk geographically tagged to the state of Assam in India. The silk is known for its extreme durability and has a natural yellowish golden tint with a shimmering, glossy texture. It was previously reserved for the use of royalty. From time immemorial many ethnic and tribal groups have produced Muga silk.

Uniqueness of Muga Silk:

- It has a natural shining golden colour.
- Muga silk is a stain free fabric.
- Muga silk fabric is the second costliest fabric in the world next to pashmina.
- Muga silk is precious durable, lustrous strongest silk among the all types of natural silk.
- No artificial dye is required.
- Everlasting colour stability. The golden colour is increased after every wash instead of decay of shine.

Muga silk remains a classic item that every woman desires to own, however its traditional outlook, an non-versatility makes the demand a little niche. Nevertheless, the fabric does have a global connect specially in Japan where designers are using it to make 'Kimonos' and other traditional Japanese dresses.
